NOTICE

Department of Botany is organizing a unique competition for students called 'Concepts through Cartooning' on 28th February 2021. This interdepartmental competition is open for students to explain any concept of biological sciences from any discipline of Botany, Zoology, Microbiology, Biochemistry and Biotechnology but via the format of cartooning. This would foster the creativity of the student, motivate them to read more and at the same time create better understanding of the scientific concept without getting into the details in terms of scientific language and nomenclature.

Report of the interdepartmental competition 'Concepts through Cartooning' organized by the department of Botany under DBT Star College Scheme

The interdepartmental activity of learning concepts through cartooning was well received by students. Along with students from different disciplines of science stream, students of non science departments like humanities, commerce, BVoc and BAF also enthusiastically participated in the competition. Varied topics from DNA to genetic engineering, saline seashore vegetation of mangroves to useful plants as biofuels, concept of immunity, blood coagulations and threat to marine life with human intervention were painted as cartoons with effective message sent across in a lighter way. In light of the the originality of the concept delivery in terms of characters selected or created, the punch lines and the clear message coming through the submissions for the competition, it can be described as the well conceived and well delivered event organized by the department.
